From the Paris Gazette, dated Dec. 7.

Naples, November 6.

THE Assassination of two Jews at Pelara which was lately perpetrated, has raised great Indignation in the Publick; and the Judges being of Opinion that it requires some exemplary Punishment, ordered that according to the Sentence Collateral, they should be dragged out of the Church of Notre Dame des Anges, where they had taken Refuge to enjoy Immunity: It was accordingly ordered that the Soldiers and Shirries who had been set at the Gates to hinder their Escape, should fetch them out by force, which was executed. Some zealous Ecclesiasticks would upon this Occasion have perswaded Cardinal Pignatelli, Archbishop of Naples, to fulminate his Censures; but he having communicated the Matter to the Regent of the Vicariat, refused; it appearing that by the Bulls the most favourable to Immunities, Assassins by Profession and Apostatized as these are, could not enjoy the benefit of them: The Ecclesiastical Court therefore, in Concert with the Secular, have caused them to be arrested, and wait an Answer from Rome. The 31st of last Month the Nuns of the ancient Monastery of Sancta Maria d'Alvina of the Order of St. Benedict, after having refused to obey the Decree of Rome, which obliges them under great Penalties to stop up their Windows which look out into the Street, opened their Gates and marched out in Procession with the Cross and Wax Tapers, taking their Way to the Monastery of St. Marcellin, having prayed the Nuns of that House to receive them. The Superiour of the former not being able to change their Resolution, had recourse to the Authority of the Viceroy, who by Menaces had much to do to make them return, nor did they do it without protesting that they would not remain there, since the shutting up those Windows made it as dark as a Prison, declaring that if the Cloister had been as it is now they had never made Profession. But Count Thann has appeased them, by giving them Hopes that the Inconvenience they complain of shall be remedied. Two Gallies are arrived from Malta, and 'tis said the Commander has Order to ask Leave to buy up 20000 Measures of Corn for the Magazines of that Island. One of the Sons of the Viceroy will embark upon those Gallies to go to Malta, in order to be Page to the Grand Master. The Ecclesiasticks and privileged Places are dissatisfied at the Imposition of Two per Cent upon the Rents of Houses for repairing the Streets.
